LAYSAN IS DEPOSED

Max Schlemmer's lease of the island was renewed February 8 last, which was eight days after President Taft had signed his proclamation. This, however, was not known in Hawaii at the time, the proclamation not being received here until after the lease had been signed.

Some doubts were felt both by Governor Frear and King Max at the time in regard to the validity of the lease, and lately Governor Frear, at the solicitation of Captain Schlemmer, wrote to the authorities at Washington for information in this regard. He has not heard from them yet, but the cablegram received by The Advertiser setles the question

Effect of a Story.

This cablegram, coming as it does right on top of the one received the day before stating that the Kukui is to be sent to the bird islands to protect the sea fowl from Japanese poachers, and following within two weeks on the story published in The Advertiser to the effect that the birds of the bird islands are being ruthlessly slaughtered by Japanese skin hunters, makes it appear that the publication of the fact that the Japanese are killing off the sea fowl of the islands has reached Washington and has had immediate effect.

Laysan is one of the islands where the Japanese skin-hunters have been doing their bloody and wasteful work. Captain Schlemmer, when seen last Telephone 489 night, stated that last year during his absence from the island, parties of skin-hunters landed there and not only killed thousands of sea fowl which they despoiled of their plumage, but slaughtered great numbers wantonly, making no effort to remove the feathers and skins. He believes that this was done on account of jealousy among different parties of hunters, who killed many of the birds simply to keep others from getting them. They simply slaughtered the helpless breeding fowl and left them lying on the ground to rot. They have virtually cleared the island of birds already, and it would take only another year or so of such ruthless bird murder to drive all the birds from

Wanton Slaughter. This, says Captain Schlemmer, has already been done on other islands. Frigate Shoals has been absolutely cleared of birds by the Japanese, and many other islands in that part of the world as well,

Last year the Japanese not only killed the small birds whose wings they want, but, for the first time, so far as is known, slaughtered the larger birds as well, such as the goonies. It seems that, in order to put the birds under the protection of the federal government, the Washington authorities have decided to take Laysan away from King Max. When he is there, he can keep the Japanese from committing their depredations. But a large part of the time, the King is absent from his country, and unless there is some one there to prevent them, the poachers work their own sweet will. Up to this time the proclamation of the bird reserve has had little or no effect, for there has been no way of enforcing the provisions of the proclamation. There is no revenue cutter in these waters and no one to go after the peachers.

But now that the Kukui has been commissioned temporarily a revenue cutter, there is trouble in sight for the bird killers, and they will be forced years of age and I suffered from backto stop their bloody work.
